Summary of this inspection

Why we carried out this inspection

We carried out this inspection to check whether Cirencester NHS Treatment Centre had taken action to meet the following essential standards:

- Supporting workers

This was an unannounced inspection.

How we carried out this inspection

We carried out a visit on 19 August 2014, talked with staff and reviewed information given to us by the provider.

What people told us and what we found

We previously visited this service in November 2013. At that time we raised concerns that staff did not consistently receive formal supervision. This meant they did not have adequate opportunities to talk through any issues about their role with their line manager or supervisor, receive feedback about their performance or agree personal development plans. We were also concerned that a medical practitioner working in the treatment centre on the day of our visit was not up-to-date with their mandatory (non-medical) training.

We returned to see whether the provider had made improvements. We spoke with the centre manager, other senior staff and the newly appointed administrator. We looked at training and supervision records and staff files.

The provider had taken steps to provide a more structured approach to supervision and evidence was provided to show that most staff received regular supervision. We also saw evidence that most staff, including medical staff, were up-to-date with mandatory training.

You can see our judgements on the front page of this report.

More information about the provider

Please see our website www.cqc.org.uk for more information, including our most recent judgements against the essential standards. You can contact us using the telephone number on the back of the report if you have additional questions.

There is a glossary at the back of this report which has definitions for words and phrases we use in the report.

Our judgements for each standard inspected

Supporting workers

✓ Met this standard

Staff should be properly trained and supervised, and have the chance to develop and improve their skills

Our judgement

The provider was meeting this standard.

People were cared for by staff who were supported to deliver care and treatment safely and to an appropriate standard.

Reasons for our judgement

Most staff had received regular supervision and an annual appraisal. A staff supervision log was maintained so that this could be monitored. The manager told us that all non-medical staff would receive formal individual supervision at least every three months, although in practice, informal supervision took place more frequently. In addition, group supervision formed part of regular team and unit wide meetings. We saw minutes of these meetings.

We noticed some gaps on the supervision log. Most of these were explained with reference to the appropriate staff files or by speaking with staff; however this indicated that record keeping and monitoring needed to be further improved. The supervision log also highlighted that bank staff had not consistently received regular supervision. The manager explained that because these staff worked infrequently and irregularly, scheduled formal meetings were sometimes cancelled as the staff were unavailable. The provider acknowledged that temporary staff should be treated the same as permanent staff and agreed to put measures in place to rectify this.

Staff received regular training and development. This was monitored locally by the manager and centrally by the provider. Monthly updates from the provider highlighted any staff who required refresher training and those booked to attend forthcoming training. At the time of our visit 96% of staff were up-to-date with mandatory training. This included all medical staff who worked at the centre. The medical practitioner who had previously been out-of-date with some mandatory training had completed the necessary updates.

About CQC inspections

We are the regulator of health and social care in England.

All providers of regulated health and social care services have a legal responsibility to make sure they are meeting essential standards of quality and safety. These are the standards everyone should be able to expect when they receive care.

The essential standards are described in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 (Regulated Activities) Regulations 2010 and the Care Quality Commission (Registration) Regulations 2009. We regulate against these standards, which we sometimes describe as "government standards".

We carry out unannounced inspections of all care homes, acute hospitals and domiciliary care services in England at least once a year to judge whether or not the essential standards are being met. We carry out inspections of other services less often. All of our inspections are unannounced unless there is a good reason to let the provider know we are coming.

There are 16 essential standards that relate most directly to the quality and safety of care and these are grouped into five key areas. When we inspect we could check all or part of any of the 16 standards at any time depending on the individual circumstances of the service. Because of this we often check different standards at different times.

When we inspect, we always visit and we do things like observe how people are cared for, and we talk to people who use the service, to their carers and to staff. We also review information we have gathered about the provider, check the service's records and check whether the right systems and processes are in place.

We focus on whether or not the provider is meeting the standards and we are guided by whether people are experiencing the outcomes they should be able to expect when the standards are being met. By outcomes we mean the impact care has on the health, safety and welfare of people who use the service, and the experience they have whilst receiving it.

Our inspectors judge if any action is required by the provider of the service to improve the standard of care being provided. Where providers are non-compliant with the regulations, we take enforcement action against them. If we require a service to take action, or if we take enforcement action, we re-inspect it before its next routine inspection was due. This could mean we re-inspect a service several times in one year. We also might decide to re-inspect a service if new concerns emerge about it before the next routine inspection.

In between inspections we continually monitor information we have about providers. The information comes from the public, the provider, other organisations, and from care workers.

You can tell us about your experience of this provider on our website.

How we define our judgements

The following pages show our findings and regulatory judgement for each essential standard or part of the standard that we inspected. Our judgements are based on the ongoing review and analysis of the information gathered by CQC about this provider and the evidence collected during this inspection.

We reach one of the following judgements for each essential standard inspected.

✓ Met this standard This means that the standard was being met in that the provider was compliant with the regulation. If we find that standards were met, we take no regulatory action but we may make comments that may be useful to the provider and to the public about minor improvements that could be made.

✗ Action needed This means that the standard was not being met in that the provider was non-compliant with the regulation. We may have set a compliance action requiring the provider to produce a report setting out how and by when changes will be made to make sure they comply with the standard. We monitor the implementation of action plans in these reports and, if necessary, take further action. We may have identified a breach of a regulation which is more serious, and we will make sure action is taken. We will report on this when it is complete.

✗ Enforcement action taken If the breach of the regulation was more serious, or there have been several or continual breaches, we have a range of actions we take using the criminal and/or civil procedures in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 and relevant regulations. These enforcement powers include issuing a warning notice; restricting or suspending the services a provider can offer, or the number of people it can care for; issuing fines and formal cautions; in extreme cases, cancelling a provider or managers registration or prosecuting a manager or provider. These enforcement powers are set out in law and mean that we can take swift, targeted action where services are failing people.

Where we find non-compliance with a regulation (or part of a regulation), we state which part of the regulation has been breached. Only where there is non compliance with one or more of Regulations 9-24 of the Regulated Activity Regulations, will our report include a judgement about the level of impact on people who use the service (and others, if appropriate to the regulation). This could be a minor, moderate or major impact.

Minor impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had an impact on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The impact was not significant and the matter could be managed or resolved quickly.

Moderate impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had a significant effect on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The matter may need to be resolved quickly.

Major impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had a serious current or long term impact on their health, safety and welfare, or there was a risk of this happening. The matter needs to be resolved quickly

We decide the most appropriate action to take to ensure that the necessary changes are made. We always follow up to check whether action has been taken to meet the standards.
